How to Understand Debits and Credits wikiHow

To understand debits and credits, know that debits are expenses and losses and that credits are incomes and gains. You should also remember that they have to balance, meaning that if a debit is added to an account, then a credit is added to another account. To keep debits and credits in balance, keep a ledger with credits on one side and debits on the other. Then, use the ledger to calculate the ending balance and update your balance sheet.
